

Evolution of Multicellular Life

Big Picture

This is a very brief description of how the organisms that we have today evolved from the early, single-celled organisms that lived in water two billion years ago. We must remember that it took an extremely long period of time for the modern-day organisms to appear and that there were many more organisms that today's organisms evolved from. These species were forced to adapt to Earth's constantly changing environment.

Key Terms

Geologic Time Scale: Divides the history of the Earth into different time periods based on the climate and the types of organisms living on Earth at the time.

Mass Extinction: When some sort of geologic or climate change causes a large number of species to go extinct.

Extinction: When all organisms of a particular species die; this can be a result of some natural phenomenon, such as a meteor falling.

Important Eras

The geologic time scale organizes Earth's history by major changes in geology and climate and by important events in the evolution of life. These are some of the key eras organized in chronological order:

Late Precambrian Era:

Occurred two billion years ago to about half a billion years ago.

There were a lot of geologic and climate changes to the Earth.

- The continents drifted away and toward one another, eventually forming the continents we have now.
- There were also fluctuating carbon dioxide levels due to volcanic activity. This caused the climate to change constantly, as the Earth was continually going in and out of ice ages. One ice age was so cold, the Earth was completely frozen!

About a billion years ago, the first multicellular organisms existed.

- Single-celled organisms often found in freshwater on the coast to the ocean to colonies and to plants. Different multicellular cells, such as fungi, algae, and animals, evolved from these organisms. The world depended on one another, and thus the evolution of single-celled organisms became multicellular organisms.

The snow ended half a billion years ago with a mass extinction. Due to some change in climate change, the climate was too hot for the rest of the time. This event, now known that this mass extinction paved the way for a lot of new species to form in the next era, the Paleozoic Era.

Ordovician Period:

The Ordovician Period of life that occurred right before the Paleozoic Era. This happened as a result of the mass extinction that occurred at the end of the Precambrian era. When the conditions were no longer too hot or too cold, organisms such as trilobites, it is believed to have evolved in the next era.

Paleozoic Era:

Occurred around 544-252 million years ago; so much happened in this era that it had to be divided into 6 periods

- Cambrian Period: Because the preceding era ended with a mass extinction, this period began with a huge explosion of new organisms. Ancient organisms such as sponges and trilobites formed.
- Ordovician Period: Although no animals lived on land (all animals were invertebrates that still lived in water), plants such as mosses started appearing on land, and the earliest fish started appearing.
- Silurian Period: Fish and coral continued to live in the oceans, and vascular plants, such as ferns, evolved on land.
- Devonian Period: A type of fish evolved to breathe oxygen when its head was above water. Moreover, seed plants were invented on land!
- Carboniferous Period: The large plants of the Permian era were a huge source of carbon that was used to create oil. The animals of the Permian were able to breathe on land as well as in the water, and amphibians able to reproduce on land as well.

- Permian Period: Trilobites, a huge land mass formed when all the continents on Earth were stuck together. In this period, the conditions were very dry. During Permian, the animals of other adaptations. Plants had many more vascular cells that helped them to produce more life.

Triassic Period:

This was a mass extinction at the end of the Permian Period, marking the end of the Paleozoic Era.
