The function of branding may appear insignificant in the banking industry, where risk management and sophisticated quant tactics collide. For this reason, digital marketing for financial services marketing is crucial. Leaders in marketing at banks, funds, and consulting firms are eager to explore digital marketing for financial services marketing due to its proven low-funnel return on investment and the indisputable advantage of improved measurement. Even more so are fintech platforms and applications. However, marketers in a variety of sectors frequently underestimate the numerous advantages of non-digital marketing techniques. It all comes down to creating a clear, recognizable brand that appeals to stakeholders, investors, and the general public. It's where and how you show up: Why does Fisher Investments advertise its low-cost funds in all-text advertisements using fear-mongering? Why does our client PURE Insurance support the Pebble Beach Pure Insurance Championship, which matches PGA Champions League pros with young First Tee players? Because it speaks volumes about the posture of both businesses and how and why they want the confidence of their customers.

Is it possible for digital marketing to help financial services advertising? Indeed. It is important, however, to avoid going all in with performance marketing. Why?
