2. Which answer correctly matches two vocabulary terms associated with biochemical reactions with the substances used in this lesson's laboratory activity?

3. Which answer explains what effect a change in pH will have on an enzyme's ability to change the rate at which a reaction occurs?

- It will likely prevent the indicator from binding to the enzyme's active site, and therefore increase the rate of reaction.
- It will likely increase the size of the active site, making it easier for the substrate to bind to the enzyme, and decreasing the rate of reaction.
- It will likely increase the attraction of the substrate to the active site by changing the charge on the enzyme's amino acids, and increasing the rate of reaction.
- It will likely denature the enzyme protein entirely, and increase the rate of reaction.
- It will likely alter the shape of the active site, making it harder for the substrate and enzyme to bind, and slowing down the rate of reaction.
