

ESSAY PLANNING SCAFFOLD

This is a tool you may use for planning and organizing your analytical essay. It is a required assignment, but your completion of this scaffold will result in a much stronger essay which more closely meets the essay Content and Organization expectations.

Name: _____ Deadline for submission of first draft: _____

Some advice for how to proceed:

- 1 Identify what you want to prove (your thesis)
- 2 Locate concrete details to support your thesis
- 3 Draft body paragraphs first
- 4 Draft introduction, then conclusion.

Introduction:

Attention Grabber: This should draw your reader in and make them interested in your argument. There are many types of A/Gs: imagery, a shocking statement, a direct quotation, "big-to-little," a question, just to name a few.

Synopsis: Here, be sure to identify the title and author of the work you are analyzing. Also, offer a brief overview of the main concept and ideas involved in the work you are analyzing.

Thesis Statement: Your thesis should identify for your reader exactly what the point(s) is/are that you are going to prove in the essay. Do not give specific details yet.

Body Paragraph #1

Topic Sentence (TS): Your TS should identify for your reader exactly what the point(s) is/are that you are going to prove in this paragraph.

Context (Cx): You must know your Cd before you write this. Your Cx should help the reader understand when and where your Cd happens in the story. Consider the story like a timeline... the context helps your reader locate your Cd on a timeline by explaining what has happened right before the Cd.

Concrete Detail (Cd): Here, locate specific text evidence that PROVES the point of your topic sentence. The Cd should not merely "tell" the same information as your TS offers, it should "show" your point.

Commentary (Cm): This should be the longest part of your paragraph. Here, explain your Cd, including but not limited to: •Why your Cd is significant •How it proves your TS and thesis •What conclusions can be drawn from your Cd •What implications your Cd has on other ideas/characters/events in the text. OR any other analysis you can offer!

If you have multiple pieces of evidence to prove your topic sentence in this paragraph, include transitions between multiple Cx/Cd/Cm sequences. For help, see your teacher!*
