Features of a newspaper

Journalistic Writing Knowledge Organiser

most important information given at the beginning

Introductory paragraph

The introductory paragraph is the first paragraph of a newspaper article. It is the most important part of the article as it is the first thing that the reader sees. It should be short and snappy, and it should give the reader a clear idea of what the article is about. It should also include the who, what, when, where and how of the story.

Body of newspaper

The body of the newspaper article is the main part of the article. It is where the writer provides the details of the story. It should be written in a clear and concise style, and it should be organized into paragraphs. The writer should use a variety of sentence structures and punctuation to make the article interesting and easy to read.

Quote

Quotes are used to provide the reader with a direct quote from a person involved in the story. They are used to provide evidence for the writer's claims and to add interest to the article. Quotes should be used sparingly and should be clearly identified as such.

Picture

Pictures are used to provide the reader with a visual representation of the story. They can be used to illustrate a point, to provide evidence, or to simply make the article more interesting. Pictures should be used sparingly and should be clearly identified as such.

Concluding paragraph

The concluding paragraph is the final paragraph of the article. It should summarize the main points of the article and provide a clear ending. It should be short and snappy, and it should leave the reader with a clear understanding of the story.

Bias in media

"Media bias" refers to a real or perceived tendency of media such as newspaper articles to approach both the presentation of particular stories, and the selection of which stories to cover, with an unbalanced perspective.
