Subject: {PQRST}

Dear John Linkon,

I ----- (mention your name) working as a ----- (mention job title) with the ----- (mention the company name) would like to connect with you over a discussion of our ----- (mention about the event).

It is our annual event and like every year, we are planning to organize this event and for this year as well, we are looking out for sponsors who can make the event a huge success. For this year, we are looking for sponsors, who can help us with the funding estimating to the amount ----- (mention the amount).

As we were going through your profile, we have seen that in the past also you have supported such events and you have a huge interest in this industry. The event will be of complete benefit for both the parties and will be of great use in getting the limelight among the public.

As you must know about the background of our company, and we are not as big as your organization, so we rely on external sponsors to help us in raising funds for the event.

Hereby, we are also enclosing the event brief and essential documents that will help you in getting some more insight about the event. In case, you have any query or doubt please feel free to contact us anytime.

We are looking forward to hearing from you soon and to have a great association with your organization.

Yours Sincerely,

Tarak Mehta

Dichter,2003 For more than thirty five years Thomas W Dichter has worked in the field of international development managing and evaluating projects for nongovernmental organizations directing a Peace Corps country program and serving as a consultant for such agencies as USAID UNDP and the World Bank On the basis of this extensive and varied experience he has become an outspoken critic of what he terms the international poverty alleviation industry He believes that efforts to reduce world poverty have been well intentioned but largely ineffective On the whole the development industry has failed to serve the needs of the people it has sought to help To make his case Dichter reviews the major trends in development assistance from the 1960s through the 1990s illustrating his analysis with eighteen short stories based on his own experiences in the field The analytic chapters are thus grounded in the daily life of development workers as described in the stories Dichter shows how development organizations have often become caught up in their own self perpetuation and in public relations efforts designed to create an illusion of effectiveness Tracing the evolution of the role of money as opposed to ideas in development assistance he suggests how financial imperatives have reinforced the tendency to sponsor time bound projects creating a dependency among aid recipients He also examines the rise of careerism and increased bureaucratization in the industry arguing that assistance efforts have become disconnected from important lessons learned on the ground In the end Dichter calls for a more light handed and artful approach to development assistance with fewer agencies and experts involved His stance is pragmatic rather than ideological or political What matters he says is what works and the current practices of the development industry are simply not effective The Nonprofit Handbook James M.
