

Lesson 1:

- The area of a parallelogram is equal to the product of a base and the associated height.

For the parallelogram shown, $A = bh$.

Note that the height of a parallelogram is not just the length of another side. The height is the perpendicular distance between two parallel sides.

- The area of a triangle is equal to one-half the product of the base and the associated height.

For the triangle shown, $A = 1/2bh$.

Read the following for a few notes about the base and the height:

- The base can be any side, although it is often easiest to name the bottom edge the base.
- The height is the distance from the vertex opposite the base to a line that lies along the base. The height is always perpendicular to the base line. Sometimes the height can be drawn so that it touches the base side. Other times, as in the drawing above, the height will touch a line that extends from the base.
- If the triangle is a right triangle, you can name one leg the base, and the other leg the height. For any other triangle, the height of the triangle is not the length of another side.

Lesson 2:

- You can use the area formula for a parallelogram to find the area formula for a trapezoid. In a trapezoid, there is only one pair of parallel sides. These sides are the bases of the trapezoid.
