

Speciation

Speciation is the process by which new biological species arise.

Stage	Definition
1. Isolation	The stage of the process and arrangement of genetic divergence, in which individuals that become that subpopulation, and thus they may have been geographically separated.
2. Divergence and mutation	The evolutionary divergence of two populations of individuals. This may be caused by genetic drift, natural selection, or both. Genetic drift is a random process of divergence, while natural selection is a non-random process of divergence.
3. Divergence and mutation	As time goes on, the genetic divergence between the two populations increases. This is due to the fact that the two populations are not exchanging genes, and thus the genetic divergence between them increases. This divergence is due to the fact that the two populations are not exchanging genes, and thus the genetic divergence between them increases.
4. Genetic divergence	Genetic divergence is the process by which the genetic composition of a population changes over time. This is due to the fact that the two populations are not exchanging genes, and thus the genetic divergence between them increases.
