Student Exploration: Estimating Population Size

Essential Question: How can we estimate the size of a population?

HW: _____
 CS: _____

Before Starting

In the following Population Biology Gizmo™, you will estimate the size of a population of fish in a pond. You will be using a technique called the mark-recapture method, which involves capturing a subset of the population, marking them, and then recapturing some.

Think about the challenges of fish as they go about their daily lives. How do you think you would estimate the size of a population of fish in a pond? Write your ideas in the space below.

1. Suppose a scientist has 100 fish and releases them. After the fish are released, you will estimate their population size. The scientist has 100 fish and releases them. After the fish are released, you will estimate their population size.

a. How many fish did you estimate? _____

b. What percent of the fish did you estimate were tagged? _____

2. A fish biologist has 100 fish and releases them. After the fish are released, you will estimate their population size. The biologist has 100 fish and releases them. After the fish are released, you will estimate their population size.
