Javascript

- Javascript is a high-level, dynamic, interpreted language widely used to create interactive content. It augments HTML and CSS, it is one of the most widely used.
- Brendan Eich created Javascript in 1995 at Netscape Communications. It was originally named "LiveScript" and finally "Javascript".

Key Features

Client-side language: Primarily used to add interactivity and provide dynamic functionality to web pages.

Event-driven: Javascript can respond to user actions, such as mouse clicks, keyboard input, and page load events.

Prototype-based: Javascript uses prototype-based inheritance, allowing objects to inherit properties and methods from other objects, providing a flexible and dynamic approach to class-like structures.

Just-in-time (JIT) compilation: Functions are compiled just-in-time, meaning they are only compiled when they are needed, which improves performance.

Asynchronous Programming: Javascript uses asynchronous programming through callbacks, promises, and async/await, allowing for non-blocking operations and efficient handling of long-running tasks without blocking the main execution thread.
