

BIOLOGY PAPER 2
(0180/2) EXAMINERS' REPORT TO TEACHERS 2019

GENERAL PERFORMANCE OF CANDIDATES

The team found the 2019 question paper to be fair because the language used and the diagrams were clear and did not disadvantage candidates. The syllabus coverage was broad enough to cater for all candidates. The questions catered for candidates of all levels of ability and could also discriminate poor candidates and better ones properly.

However the quality of the responses of candidates was worse. Their use of technical language was too dilute. For example, candidates wrote expressions such as "eggs meeting or diffusing" instead of fertilizing; "shaking" when shivering was meant; "sperms killed by antibiotics" and confusing ovary with ovum.

For their choice of genetic diagram candidates opted for homozygous dominance and the use of letters used for sex determination. They could not identify and label the cytoplasm and or identify fertilization process in the diagram.

QUESTION BY QUESTION ANALYSIS

QUESTION 1

This question was poorly done with majority of candidates correctly labelling "cilia" but missing the second part "cytoplasm".

Majority of candidates scored some marks in part (a) though they were not able to describe the functions clearly. Most of them explained that "cilia" sweeps dust instead of mucus.

Very few candidates were able to identify a goblet cell and its functions. Even though they knew the function. Some candidates described the structure of a goblet cell as "lobed" relating the function to that of white blood cells or phagocytes which can engulf bacteria.

However, most candidates made mention of "ciliary" muscles and/or hairs instead of cilia.
