The family group conference as a means of decision-making in matters of adult guardianship Julia Hond,2007-12-18 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2006 in the subject Law Comparative Legal Systems Comparative Law grade A Victoria University of Wellington language English abstract This essay considers the question whether the family group conference should be introduced as a new and additional means of decision making in New Zealand s adult guardianship law Currently the Family Law knows the family group conference only in another context When there are special problems with children the Children Young Persons and Their Families Act 1989 gives the family as a group the authority to make decisions concerning the child The question is whether this procedure is also suitable for decision making on the affairs of adult family members who are not capable of leading their lives autonomously and cannot make their own decisions for example because they suffer from mental disease or an intellectual handicap After providing an overview of the current adult guardianship law its principles and shortcomings the family group conference will be presented and discussed as it works under the Children Young Persons and Their Families Act 1989 The main part of this research paper then deals with the advantages and disadvantages of the family group model being introduced for matters of adult guardianship It will be considered whether this decision making model can cope with the shortcomings of the current system and whether it serves the guiding principles of adult guardianship law Although family group conferences do not always work without problems this essay recommends their introduction also for adults The inclusion of the wider family in the decision making process has many benefits for the concerned person especially in terms of his or her best interest being realised Besides the family group model fits well into the current regime serves its guiding principles and is able to remedy the current system s shortcomings Hence the decision by the family group is of additional value when dealing with the affairs of adults who are not able to make healthy decisions for themselves and should therefore be introduced as an additional means of decision making

M. Vennix,1996-08-16 This book is about increasing team performance It focuses on building system dynamics models when tackling a mix of interrelated strategic problems to enhance team learning foster consensus and create commitment The book is intended to be applied in the organizations of today As the command and control organization evolves into one of decision making teams so these teams have become the critical building blocks upon which the performance of the organization depends The team members face an increased complexity of decision making with the interrelation of several strategic problems What this means is that people have different views of the situation and will define problems differently However research shows that this can in fact be very productive if and when people learn from each other in order to build a shared perspective Learning in this way might prove to be the only sustainable competitive advantage for organizations in the future As a result team leaders want to create learning teams and are confronted with issues such as how to create a situation where people doubt their ideas rather than stubbornly cling to dearly held views create a learning atmosphere rather than trying to win the discussion create a shared understanding of a problem in a team foster consensus and create commitment with a strategic decision facilitate Group Model Building Those who will benefit most from Group Model Building Facilitating Team Learning Using System Dynamics are those who are familiar with systems thinking or organizational learning or those who are working in groups and are coming up against the common difficulties
