Geography September 2 memorandum Paper 1:

Educational Reconstruction Gary McCulloch, 2013-09-05 This book presents a clear overview of the debates that surrounded the making of the 1944 Act which affected every aspect of education in this country It gives a detailed account of the tripartite divisions into three types of child that were sanctioned in the reforms of the 1940s At the same time it also emphasises the idea of education as a civic project which underlay the reforms and which was such an important part of their lasting authority The education policies of the past decade and the current attempts to shape a new education settlement need to be interpreted in a long term historical framework and in particular in relation to the aims and problems of the last great cycle of reform in the 1940s This book makes an important contribution to the development of such a framework and the social history of education policy in this country

The United States and the End of British Colonial Rule in Africa, 1941-1968 James P. Hubbard, 2014-01-10 At the end of World War II Britain possessed a vast African empire encompassing nearly 27 million square miles about 10 times larger than Britain itself But by 1965 only three small African territories remained under British control all of which would become independent before the end of 1968 This book examines the swift demise of Britain's African empire looking particularly at the role played by the United States in bringing the empire to an end It reveals how the United States was anti colonial without being actively pro independence concluding that the country's policies and actions combined with its postwar dominance directly and indirectly contributed to the political economic and social transformation of Africa
