1. Client History

Identifying Case Information: P. is a 46-year old, married woman from Austria. She has no children and is a housewife who occasionally does freelance editorial work. P. and her husband have been living in Hong Kong for 7 years and is very social with the German community here. She is a breast cancer patient in remission.

Presentation/Chief Complaint: P. sought out treatment due to anxieties of not having control of her body that manifests in medical unexplainable pain coming up and disappearing at various parts of her body. She is highly vigilant towards any sensations in her body because she fears her cancer might come back. Additionally, P. thinks that her body is expressing a lot of unresolved emotional issues and this may have been a contributing factor to her cancer in the first place. She feels that the physical symptoms she is experiencing (pain, etc.) is highly related to her emotional wellbeing.

Personal and Social History:

Family

- Growing up in a small village in Austria, P. comes from a very conservative family and area. She describes a difficult relationship with her parents who raised her with a strong Christian upbringing that she continues to practice. P. saw her father as an 'ubermensch', further explaining that this meant he was treated like God at home. She says this was behaviour was also implemented by her mother who would never defend her children and only did what her husband said. P. further describes that her father was always focused on his own life adventures and his friends, and that he didn't care much about her and her siblings. P. felt like she only got her father's attention by giving him words of admiration. She recalls feelings of being unloved as a child, and still thinks her family is insensitive at heart. P. says that when she expressed any physical or emotional needs her family would just play it down with an 'it's nothing bad, put yourself together'
