

TRAILER VACUUM BRAKING EQUIPMENT

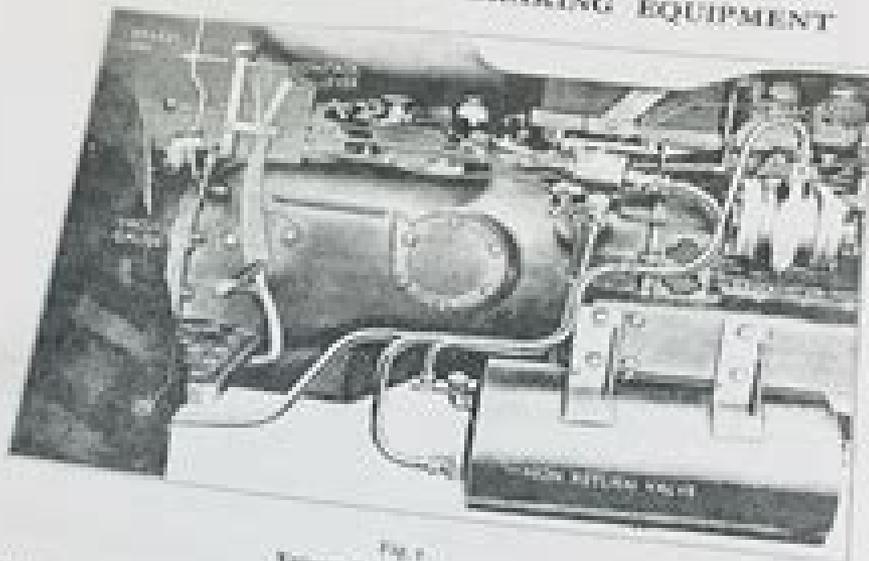

FIG. 1
Vacuum Braking Equipment

System braking equipment can be found in production equipment, to all Federal States District Agricultural and Commercial Tractors or supplied in an accessory kit under Part No. 240-2-2.

The kit comprises a rotary exhaustor, vacuum reservoir, vacuum valve, control lever, vacuum pump, quick detachable coupling and the necessary connecting pipes and brackets. To install the pump to bring same in action and connect to main line, it is necessary to modify the last mentioned the reservoir to be driven from the top of the vacuum tank. The parts necessary for the installation of the last mentioned pump are also included in the kit.

The rotary exhaustor is mounted behind the fuel injection pump and driven at half engine speed by the pump camshaft. It consists of a rotor in which a cone is supported by heavy duty ball bearings. The cone has six sliding vanes or plates, which are held in contact with the internal bore of the body by vanes only. The ends of the bore of the body are open air sealed by spring-loaded plates which draw against the ends of the cone vanes, a seal being made between the end plates and the internal bore by means of a seal.

The method of operation of the rotary exhaustor is as follows:—
The rotor is supported vertically to the internal bore of the body, being closer to the body at the bottom than at the top. The rotor and end sealing plate make six separate compartments and as the rotor is supported vertically to the internal bore, these compartments will be of a larger volume towards the top of the exhaustor than at the bottom.

As the rotor commences to rotate in a clockwise direction, when viewed from the front of the engine, the sliding vanes will move in and out of the rotary exhaustor body. Air is drawn from the vacuum reservoir, into the exhaustor body, at the point where the compartments are increasing in size, and expelled through the motor on the side where the compartments are decreasing in size, and expelled. The intake and outlet pressures of the air will obviously vary depending on the amount of vacuum existing at the reservoir at any time.
