Swimming is an integral part of the life history of many fish species as is intimately linked with their ability to express feeding and predator avoidance behaviors habitat selection and environmental preferences social and reproductive behaviors as well as migratory behaviors Therefore swimming is an important determinant factor of fitness in a true Darwinian sense and not surprisingly swimming performance has been often used as a measure of physiological fitness in fish The main aim of this Research Topic is to showcase some of the current studies designed to improve our understanding of the physiological energetic and metabolic requirements of swimming and of the adaptive responses to swimming in fish FEMS

J.

Bowden, Cynthia V. Burek, R. Wilding, 2005 Often regarded as the Cinderella of palaeontological studies palaeobotany has a history that contains some fascinating insights into scientific endeavour especially by palaeontologists who were perusing a personal interest rather than a career The problems of maintaining research facilities in universities especially in the modern era are described and reveal a noticeable absence of a national UK strategy to preserve centres of excellence in an avowedly specialist area Accounts of some of the pioneers demonstrate the importance of collaboration between taxonomists and illustrators The importance of palaeobotany in the rise of geoconservation is outlined as well as the significant and influential role of women in the discipline Although this volume has a predominantly UK focus two very interesting studies outline the history of palaeobotanical work in Argentina and China
