Recommending Interventions Based on Scientific Evidence

W-8 Collaborate with others to support and enhance client services.

We often work with others to ensure the best outcomes for our clients. Collaboration is necessary for creating effective interventions. When we think of collaboration, we often think of interdisciplinary collaboration (e.g. with Speech-Language Pathologists and Occupational Therapists) but we also collaborate with clients, stakeholders, and family members as well as with other professionals like doctors, psychologists, teachers, and anyone else on our clients' support team. Remember that we are all on the same side - the clients!

Barriers to Effective Collaboration - Henderson et al (2020) identified the following barriers to effective interdisciplinary collaboration:

- 1. Structural barriers include time constraints due to busy schedules, organizational constraints (due to organizations not prioritizing or supporting collaboration), geographic distance (working in different locations, making regular communication and collaboration challenging).
- 2. Interdisciplinary differences - Professionals may not fully understand each other's roles, terminology, or methodologies. There may also be differences in approach to treatment.
- 3. Interdisciplinary differences - Professionals may not fully understand each other's roles, terminology, or methodologies. There may also be differences in approach to treatment.
- 4. Ethical differences - Different professions have different ethical standards, creating tension with other professionals.
- 5. Interdisciplinary differences - Professionals may not fully understand each other's roles, terminology, or methodologies. There may also be differences in approach to treatment.
- 6. Measurement differences - Different professions use different measurement tools and methods, making it difficult to compare and contrast results.
