

Which exponential functions represent real-world growth?

- An exponential decay function that has a negative growth factor.
- An exponential growth function that has a positive growth factor.
- An exponential growth function that has a negative growth factor.

Lesson 2.1.1: Exponential Functions (Page 23)

Students practice to graph the exponential functions using the $y = a(b)^x + c$ form. They graph the exponential functions and determine which functions are increasing and which are decreasing. They also determine the horizontal asymptote of each function.

After graphing the exponential functions, students are asked to determine the domain and range of each function. They are also asked to determine the horizontal asymptote of each function. They are also asked to determine the growth factor of each function.

Graphical Representation	Table Representation	Equation Representation
		$y = 2^x$
		$y = 2^{-x}$
		$y = x$

Students are asked to determine the domain and range of each function. They are also asked to determine the horizontal asymptote of each function. They are also asked to determine the growth factor of each function.
