

1-Part III, Fugate's Argument Plans

What "Fugate" means (https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=911111111111)

Place each of the following argument plans in the appropriate section of the chart. Use the sample below to help you organize Fugate's argument plan.

Describe different types of fugate messages that writers use. Answers will vary.

- Messages based on "factual" information often use well-known information about the system to persuade.
- Some earlier types of messages:
 - Informational provide useful information. They provide good information. Therefore, they are good to read and use. Good messages include instructions and advice.
 - Informative are the most basic of messages. They are based on the assumption that people often have misinformation about a topic.
 - Explanatory messages are the type of message that explains why something is the way it is. They are not argumentative. They are descriptive because they do not try to persuade but to inform about a topic.

Two-Part Writing Assignments

What are the two parts of a two-part writing assignment?

1. The first part of a two-part writing assignment is a summary.
2. The second part of a two-part writing assignment is a response.

What are the two parts of a two-part writing assignment?

1. The first part of a two-part writing assignment is a summary.
2. The second part of a two-part writing assignment is a response.

Describe the structure of a two-part writing assignment.

- Fugate's message was in both text and video. A type of evidence that includes text and video is called a multimedia message.
- In 1991, the company started and developed a new type of product called multimedia.
- THE FIRST PART of a two-part writing assignment is a summary of the information that is in the text and video. The second part of a two-part writing assignment is a response to the information that is in the text and video.
- Writing a summary is important because it shows that you understand the information that is in the text and video. Writing a response is important because it shows that you have your own ideas about the information that is in the text and video.
