

A photograph of Jean-Luc Mélenchon, a French politician, sitting in a hearing room. He is wearing a dark blue suit, a white shirt, and a red tie. He has grey hair and is wearing glasses. He has a serious expression and is looking slightly to the left. In the background, another man with glasses and a blue jacket is visible, looking in the same direction. The setting appears to be a formal hearing or courtroom.

French Arms Exports Lucie Béraud-Sudreau,2020-03-25 From De Gaulle onwards France's strategic independence has been predicated on self sufficiency in modern weapons To achieve and maintain the requisite defence industrial base in the context of limited domestic orders Paris sought to promote the export of its arms During the Cold War this underpinned but was also an expression of France's determination to resist bipolar domination France offered customers around the world an alternative to reliance on one superpower or the other and in doing so it generated the revenue to support an extensive domestic arms industry The end of the Cold War ushered in fundamental changes however Western defence spending shrank and the global market was turned upside down While France's arms export policy was less affected by human rights concerns than other democracies it was not immune to pressures stemming from the consolidation of Europe's defence industrial base and the increased interest of the EU in regulating the arms trade This Adelphi book considers how France has responded to changing political and market circumstances in the way that it promotes and controls the export of weapons It examines the rationale for considering a liberal arms export policy as essential to French independence and the institutional arrangements that underpinned this It tracks the dramatic changes in the global arms market since 1990 in terms of demand and market competition and charts the response of the French government to these changes The book underlines how the French machinery of government as a directing force behind the defence industry has been resistant to the notion of export restraint even in the case of sales to authoritarian regimes However it argues that France now faces a dilemma over whether to continue with a long successful course or to moderate its independence through greater collaboration to bolster European integration and better compete globally Journal of American Folklore ,1926 Canon Tiburtius de composition, harmonie et rythme G. de Vianna Kelsch,1921 Arms Sales and Regional Stability The International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS),2023-04-28 The book considers the main arms exporting countries including China Russia and the US as well as several European states and the policies each employs in deciding advanced weapons sales to key regions of the world It examines whether such sales are inherently stabilising or de stabilising regarding regional security Regions reviewed in detail include the Middle East and the Indo Pacific Combat aircraft sales are a focus for the volume given both their practical and symbolic importance The volume focuses on the behaviour and policies of the main arms exporting nations since the end of the Cold War shifts in their arms export policies and the tensions that can emerge within or between countries over proposed arms sales It also considers the impact of countries that were previously only recipients of advanced weapons moving to develop their own defence industrial base Drones and International Law Rebecca Mignot-Mahdavi,2023-07-13 The technological characteristics of drones together with the law have been instrumental in expanding warfare in time and space in the counter terrorism context Islamophobia and Translations of Securitization in the UK, France, and Italy Ugo Gaudino,2026-02-13 The book demonstrates how the intricately and
