natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a multi population that shows

ORIGINAL TO NEW POPULATION

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed the theory of natural selection.

Charles Darwin proposed that organisms with traits that are better suited to their environment will survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. This process is called natural selection.

Over time, the traits of a population will change as individuals with favorable traits survive and reproduce more successfully than those with less favorable traits. This process is called evolution.

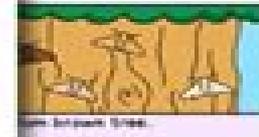

Natural selection is a key mechanism of evolution, leading to the development of new species and the extinction of others.

The theory of natural selection explains the diversity of life on Earth and the adaptations of organisms to their environments.

Understanding natural selection helps us appreciate the complexity and beauty of the natural world.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown mice lives in an area of dark rock. They have two traits:	One day a hawk comes to hunt for the common variation.
Some mice have dark fur and are camouflaged against the dark rock where they live.	The light brown mice are more likely to get eaten - they are the birds' favorite!
A higher proportion of dark mice are born in the next generation, meaning the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population has changed as 100% of the mice have dark fur.

As the mice eat, some light and some dark against the medium tree trunk, so they will be eaten in number, i.e. they are not equal.

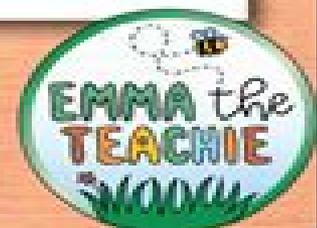

STABILIZING

What is it?

movement of genes in or out of a population happens through movement of individuals. This can bring new alleles into a population or change the frequency of existing alleles.

Imported alleles are introduced into the population, which may be beneficial or detrimental.
