The hydrological cycle refers to the cycle of water between atmosphere, lith

The drainage basin is an open system as it allows the movement of energy at boundaries.

The global hydrological cycle is a closed system as there is no transfer of mass or leaves the system. However, there may be transfers of energy crossing the system, such as solar energy and gravitational potential energy.

The hydrological cycle: Also called the water cycle is the movement of water between the ocean, atmosphere, earth surface (vegetation and underground - ground water stores).

Middle course landforms
Erosional and depositional landforms

Meanders are bends in speed of waterflow but water, the thalweg, is deeper and there is less action and abrasion, the river cliff on the outer (channel being shallower energy, material is deposited within a meander) on the Drainage basin: Also called the river basin or the catchment area, it is the area of land surrounding a river where the river water comes from.

Watershed: The boundary of the drainage basin which divides one river basin from another.

- Cross section = (of the river) the width of the river multiplied by the average depth across the river. It is measured in m². Increases downstream as the river is wider and deeper.
- River velocity = the speed of the river water. It is measured in m/sec. Increases downstream as there are less friction.
Determined by:
 - Gradient of river profile (steeper gradient)
 - Volume of water (larger volume)
 - Amount of friction between the bed, banks and bedload (less friction)
- River discharge = the amount of water flowing in a river. It is measured in cumecs or m³ per second. It is calculated by cross section (m²) multiplied by the velocity (m/sec).

A uterles

Infiltration = downwards movement in soil
Percolation = downwards movement in rocks
Throughflow = sideways movement of water through soil
Groundwater flow = sideways movement of water through rocks

The three types of clouds

Cirrus: high altitude, thin clouds like horse tails
Cumulus: white, fluffy clouds which look like cauliflower
Stratus: clouds which form in layers, when they are grey they cause rain

The long profile of the river is the line drawn from the source to the mouth showing how the gradient of the river changes. A normal river will have a steeper gradient at the upper course and a gentle gradient at the lower course.

Erosion: the break up of the banks and bed of the river channel and removal of the material so the river channel becomes wider and deeper. Requires a lot of energy.

Upper course landforms
Erosional landforms

Waterfalls are formed when there is a layer of hard rocks (granite) situated over soft rocks (sandstone).

- When water runs over them, the soft rock is eroded quicker than the hard rock and this creates a step.
- As erosion continues, the hard rock is undercut forming an overhang.
- Abrasion and hydraulic action erodes to create a plunge pool.
- Overtime, the plunge pool gets bigger, increasing the size of the overhang until the hard rock is no longer supported.
- It collapses into the plunge pool to be broken up by attrition.
