

INVESTIGATIVE REPORT WRITING

The purpose of this subject is to equip the participants/ students with the basic knowledge and skills in writing police investigative reports. With the influx of different communication gadgets, police report writers find difficulty in expressing their thoughts clearly for proper comprehension. While spoken and printed words exist as the two basic tools of communication, a well-written investigation report remains to be a problem in the different units.

Report Writing is a useful tool for people in a free society to express their thoughts and ideas and to obtain what they need or want. Ideas, messages, opinions and recommendations can be communicated by means of reports. When you report, you usually pass the information to someone else.

A report is a detailed account of an event, situation, etc., usually based on observation or inquiry. It contains facts gathered through careful observation or investigation, has been proven to exist as to have happened. It also contains a chronological order of events and/or actions in order by the time of their occurrence.

Investigative Report Writing is an objective statement of the investigator's findings, it is an official record of information relevant to the investigation which the investigator submits to his/her superior.

Importance of Investigative Report Writing

- a. It serves as records for police administrators in planning, directing, and organizing the unit's duties
- b. Reports can be used as legal documents in the prosecution of criminals.
- c. Reports can be used by other agencies.
- d. Reports can be useful to local media which need access to public documents.
- e. The author of a report should also consider that his/her (written) work is reflective of his personality.
- f. Reports can be a basis for research.

Preparations Needed in Report Writing

- a. Review and Organize notes
- b. Draw an outline in chronological sequence - should answer the 5W's and 1H
- c. Review for completeness
- d. Actual writing of the report

Criteria of a Good Report

- a. It must be grammatically correct.
- b. Abbreviation must be used appropriately and correct.
- c. The report should avoid slang, colloquialism or unnecessary technical terms.
