

Question: I read that it was once widely believed that the best thing that you can do during a time of pressure is to "power through." What does it mean to "power through" a situation like this?

Answer: "Power through" is to keep pushing forward, using your determination and your ability to handle stress to get through a difficult situation. It's not necessarily the best way to deal with a difficult situation, but it can be a useful strategy in some cases.

Question: How do you know when these negative automatic thoughts have taken over? What happens to your body when you feel that way?

Answer: When you start to feel that way, you may notice that your thoughts are racing, you're feeling tense, and you're having trouble concentrating. Your body may also start to feel tense, and you may have trouble breathing. These are all signs that your automatic thoughts are taking over.

Question: I understand how frustrating it feels to be stuck and to see a difficult time for you, but how is it different from your parents' and friends' stress? What advice do you have to someone who's stuck in this way?

Answer: I can't say.

Question: As though this, can you see how our thoughts can affect our emotions and actions?

Answer: Yes, it's a good idea to think of things you think are "automatic" as things that are actually under your control. You can choose to think differently about them.

Question: When I understand where you're coming from and what you're feeling is better, then how can understanding how our thoughts affect our emotions and behaviors help you understand what other people might be thinking?

Answer: As though you are thinking of the things you want to do, you may find that you're not as good at getting things done.

Question: It was good to hear that you want to help yourself to get out of this situation. How do you think about the automatic thinking patterns in your head that you're trying to change?

Answer: I can't say.

Question: As you think about you in light of your parents, do you think about all your thoughts in this situation? What are they like for you?

Question: I can't say.
