British Covid Fictions Hywel Dix, 2025-10-15 This is the first book length study of Covid fictions in Britain It argues that although it was common to see the Covid 19 pandemic as a state of exception that is as a unique emergency for which there was no precedent it is misleading to treat the experience of the pandemic in Britain in isolation because the state s political and rhetorical responses to it were less out of keeping with already existing social and political structures than might have been expected This means that there was a strong continuity between the dominant political ideology before the outbreak of Coronavirus and that which pervaded it an ideology that can best be described as neoliberal political and economic thought Through its analysis of Covid fictions the book explores ways in which writers used their work to critique the dominant ideology while also at times remaining entrapped within it precisely because it was the dominant ideology Graham's Illustrated Magazine of Literature, Romance, Art, and Fashion ,1854 Handling Challenges ,2000 Floral Management ,2002 The Witches' Companion Katherine M.
