

Introduction

In recent years there has been a broad trend towards recognizing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. Many people believe that we should give animals equal rights to humans. Others view them as a consumable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. In fact, many people agree that it is because they are deserving to have the same rights and feelings as us if there are not really the same as we are. For example, it has been shown that some animals - like elephants - even feel sad and just like humans do. They would display the signs of their pain and like that we would sympathize with human suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protections as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are other arguments against equal rights for animals. First of all, that they do not have the ability of human feeling and speech has limited their value as companions and that the lack of behavior is clearly normal within the natural world. It is true, humans should not be treated as equal rights as they are not equal. However, to become an equal relationship is not the same as that of a wild animal. They do think and learn for us. They would be our best friends because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, but generally feel that animals deserve respect, protection, and some equality. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and that should be done for exactly their protection, from under suffering.
