

Documentation improvement: All hands on deck

Improving documentation requires input and action from nurses, educators, and healthcare organizations.

Nurses

What can you do to protect your license?

- Download and read the Nurse Practice Act from your state's board of nursing website. Knowing your responsibilities as a licensed nurse helps ensure you provide safe, quality patient care and avoid legal and licensure issues.
- Review documentation resources to enhance your writing skills:
  - National Council of State Boards of Nursing: "What every nurse needs to know about state and territorial boards of nursing" (ncsbn.org/brochures-and-posters/state-and-territorial-boards-of-nursing-what-every-nurse-needs-to-know)
  - The American Nurses Association: "Principles for nursing documentation: Guidance for registered nurses" (bit.ly/3rjinKW)
- Take a refresher course on documentation and time-management skills as part of your continuing education requirements for nursing licensure.

Educators

How can you ensure nurse competency in documentation is presented on the same level with clinical skills?

- Incorporate nursing documentation with competency-based evaluation into didactic classes in undergraduate courses and provide guidelines for students on the elements of good documentation.
- Review and evaluate student notations as part of the clinical curriculum. Provide feedback for improvement and include in the course grade.

Organizational leaders

How can you support quality nursing documentation to reduce the likelihood of adverse patient outcomes?

- Implement a nursing department quality initiative related to documentation and ask nurse managers to conduct audits of a sample of patient records. Share results with staff and develop improvement strategies.
- Include documentation as a staff competency and provide annual skills education.
- Create Just Culture transparency with no blame/no fault opportunities for improvement. Use adverse patient outcomes as positive learning experiences.
- Share pertinent information with nursing leaders and quality improvement staff to develop case studies and best practices as part of education opportunities.
- Review policies and procedures to reduce nurse documentation burden, such as maintaining adequate staffing and providing good communication on process improvements and system changes.
- Institute a shared governance model with interprofessional collaboration among healthcare providers to make positive and meaningful changes to policies and procedures.
