

Action Plan

- ✔ Understand which accounts need to be recorded and which do not. Note that effect means, debit/credit, so owner's capital should be recorded as a journal.
- ✔ Analyze the effects of transactions on assets, liabilities, and owner's equity accounts.

Solution

Each transaction that is recorded is covered in the general journal. The three activities would be recorded as follows:

1. Cash Owner's Capital (Owner's investment of cash in business)	20,000	20,000
2. Equipment Accounts Payable (Purchase of equipment on account)	4,000	4,000
3. No entry because no transaction has occurred.

Learning objective

LO1 Explain what a ledger is and how it helps in the recording process.

The Ledger

The entire group of accounts maintained by a company is the ledger. The ledger provides the balance in each of the accounts as well as keeps track of changes in these balances.

Companies may use various kinds of ledgers, but every company has a general ledger. A general ledger contains all the asset, liability, and owner's equity accounts, as shown in Illustration 2-13 for R. Lind Company. Whenever we use the term "ledger" in this textbook, we are referring to the general ledger unless we specify otherwise.

Illustration 2-13

The general ledger, which contains all of a company's accounts.

Companies arrange the ledger in the sequence in which they present the accounts in their financial statements, beginning with the balance sheet accounts. First in order are the asset accounts, followed by liability accounts, owner's capital, owner's drawings, returns, and expenses. Each account is numbered for easier identification.

The ledger provides the balance in each of the accounts. For example, the Cash account shows the amount of cash available to meet current obligations. The Accounts Receivable account shows amounts due from customers, Accounts Payable shows amounts owed to creditors.
