URBAN REGENERATION ENQUIRY (HUMAN)

ENQUIRY QUESTION

Has regeneration of the London Docklands had a positive impact?

STRAND 1 - SELECTING A SUITABLE QUESTION FOR GEOGRAPHICAL ENQUIRY

Explain how the location of your fieldwork was relevant to your question being investigated. [3]

The London Docklands area is a good location to answer my question as it was near and offered a range of suitable sites which had been completely redeveloped and regenerated, sites that were in progress of being regenerated and a site which had not experienced redevelopment directly. These were in close enough proximity for me to visit all the sites in one visit and enabled a clear comparison of the sites to establish whether the redevelopment had brought about positive changes to the environment and benefits to the area.

Explain how geographical theory or concepts supported your human geography fieldwork enquiry. [3]

My enquiry was supported by an understanding of the geographical processes of de-industrialisation and inner-city decline, followed by redevelopment and regeneration. Knowing the historical context of the London Docklands area and the problems it had faced, including dereliction and deprivation, meant that I was able to consider how regeneration could alter and improve that environment to bringing more benefits. Understanding the geographical processes of inner-city decline, I was able to understand what to look for in terms of the characteristics of and judge whether the regeneration had impacted this positively.

Explain how you responded to the risks associated with your chosen site for fieldwork. [4]

There were a number of risks associated with our chosen fieldwork site as we were working in an urban area with traffic, so we only crossed roads with pedestrian crossings or used the pedestrian walkways across the site. Some areas had very little traffic, but we still needed to remain on the pavements and walk in pairs rather than a group. Additionally, there was stranger danger, and we ensured that we moved out of people's way and stood to the side when they passed. We stayed in groups of 4 at all times to stay safe. Finally, there was a risk of tripping on uneven surfaces, so we wore trainers and were focused when walking in a group, to keep an eye on pavements and road kerbs to reduce the risk.

Geosimulation on Cellular Automata Daniel Häußler,2019-02-19 Seminar paper from the year 2014 in the subject Earth Science Geography General Basics grade 2 0 University of Tübingen language English abstract The following paper will cover an overall view of cellular automata Due to the fact that the method will be considered from the outset it is accessible not only for specialists Further I tried to broach the history of cellular automata and the first well known application Game of Life Moreover a practical application will illustrate the potential of cellular automata on the basis of a NetLogo forest fire model In addition to a short analysis of this geosimulation a continuative and deeper going paper will be mentioned After this example interested readers should be able to appraise the value of cellular automata s implementation Finally the work will be rounded off with the mention of the most significant disadvantages and problems The idea to simulate the behavior of animate beings is as old as the invention of computer itself As we can easily imagine the method of cellular automata has a lot of applications in physics chemistry and biology Scientists in these subjects gladly apply cellular automata because issues follow more deterministic models than in social sciences In the following chapters I will try to illustrate to what extent the cellular automata could also be used in other subjects especially in geographical matters Human geography is often concerned with topics originating sociology economy urban development crisis management and other issues which cannot only be explained by numbers and formulas Nevertheless the method of cellular automata can be useful to understand some important issues An essential problem is the fact that in our digitalized world local development is not necessarily solely based on its direct neighborhood The model of cellular automata suggests that we have access to every direct neighbor but does not account for direct influences from beyond On the other hand such additional factors for which you would have to identify new rules again would produce amounts of data exceeding the capabilities of the model
