

THE RESEARCH PAPER

The Research Paper

Your days of writing reports for history classes are over. At earlier stages in your educational career you were likely asked to research a topic and then write down everything you learned about that topic, thereby “reporting” the history of a specific topic. Writing a research paper at the high school level still involves research and reporting, but you are building on these skills and adding ANALYSIS to the information. This means that you no longer simply write what happened, but you have to provide a perspective on history through analytical argument.

Academic Research

As you progress in your educational career, you will be expected to do more individual research. The goal of this research, especially if you pursue graduate work or an academic profession, will be to add new knowledge to your chosen academic field. It is important to know that history—while yes in some ways is the study of what happened in the past—it is not a static field. Our knowledge and understanding of past events is constantly changing and evolving based on new information we discover from archaeology, archives, and the conversations historians engage in with each other. When you write a research paper you are thus entering into this conversation, meaning that the goal is to participate in a global dialogue about the meaning, effects, and significance of events in history.

Using Research for Analysis

The heart and soul of the research paper is the thesis statement—a one-sentence statement of your argument. Your thesis is the part of your research paper that connects you to the scholarly conversation. If you do not have a thesis, then you are not writing a research paper.

HOWEVER, note that we do not call this a “thesis paper.” A research paper is a scholarly argument supported by facts and analysis. You cannot make a strong, academic argument without supporting your argument with facts. It is thus important for you to become as knowledgeable as possible in your topic.

“Because I think so,” is not a compelling argument. You need to have extensive knowledge from a diverse set of sources to support your claims.
