Poll: May most popular leader in FORTY years

But Labour dismisses prediction of Tory rout

Labour and its leaders are confident that they will win the next general election, despite a poll that predicts a landslide victory for the Conservatives.

The poll, which was conducted by YouGov, shows that 55 per cent of voters would vote for Labour in a general election, up from 48 per cent in the last election.

Labour leader Ed Miliband said: "We are confident that we will win the next general election. We have a strong and clear plan for the country, and we have the support of the majority of voters."

Conservative leader David Cameron said: "We are disappointed by the poll results, but we remain confident that we will win the next general election. We have a strong and clear plan for the country, and we have the support of the majority of voters."
