

Experiment 1Advance Study Assignment: Densities of Solids and Liquids

The advance study assignments in this laboratory manual are designed to assist you in making the calculations required in the experiment you will be doing. We do this by furnishing you with sample data and showing in some detail how that data can be used to obtain the desired results. In the advance study assignments we will often include the guiding principles as well as the specific relationships to be employed. If you work through the steps in each calculation by yourself, you should have no difficulty when you are called upon to make the necessary calculations on the basis of the data you obtain in the laboratory.

1. Finding the volume of a flask.

A student obtained a clean, dry glass-stoppered flask. She weighed the flask and stopper on an analytical balance and found the total mass to be 33.695 g. She then filled the flask with water and obtained a mass for the full stoppered flask of 64.356 g. From these data, and the fact that at the temperature of the laboratory the density of water was 0.9978 g/cm³, find the volume of the stoppered flask.

- a. First we need to obtain the mass of the water in the flask. This is found by recognizing that the mass of a sample is equal to the sum of the masses of its parts. For the filled stoppered flask:

Mass of filled stoppered flask = mass of empty stoppered flask + mass of water, so mass of water = mass of filled flask - mass of empty flask

Mass of water = _____ g - _____ g = _____ g

Many mass and volume measurements in chemistry are made by the method used in 1a. This method is called measuring by difference, and is a very useful one.

- b. The density of a pure substance is equal to its mass divided by its volume:

$$\text{Density} = \frac{\text{mass}}{\text{volume}} \quad \text{or} \quad \text{volume} = \frac{\text{mass}}{\text{density}}$$

The volume of the flask is equal to the volume of the water it contains. Since we know the mass and density of the water, we can find its volume and that of the flask. Make the necessary calculation.

Volume of water = volume of flask = _____ cm³

2. Finding the density of an unknown liquid.

Having obtained the volume of the flask, the student emptied the flask, dried it, and filled it with an unknown whose density she wished to determine. The mass of the stoppered flask when completely filled with liquid was 58.540 g. Find the density of the liquid.

- a. First we need to find the mass of the liquid by measuring by difference:

Mass of liquid = _____ g - _____ g = _____ g

Bridging Reading Aloud and Speech Production Simone Sulpizio,Sachiko Kinoshita,2016-07-25 For decades human cognition involved in reading aloud and speech production has been investigated extensively a quote search of the two in google scholar produces about 83 000 and 255 000 results respectively This large amount of research has produced quite detailed descriptions of the cognitive mechanisms that allow people to speak or to read aloud a word However despite the fact that reading aloud and speech production share some processes generation of phonology and preparation of a motor speech response the research in this two areas seems to have taken parallel and independent tracks with almost no contact between the two The present Research Topic takes an initial step towards building a bridge that will link the two research areas as we believe that such an endeavour is essential for moving forward in our understanding of how the mind brain processes words To this aim we encourage contributions exploring the relation between speech production and reading aloud The questions the Research Topic should address include but are not limited to the following To what extent are speech production and word reading reading aloud similar Are there some shared components and or mechanisms between the two process Is the time course of the supposed shared mechanisms activation similar in the two processes How does the different input conceptual vs orthographic interact with the types of information that reading and speaking share semantic and phonological knowledge articulatory codes How does a difference in the input affect the supposed common stages of processing i e phonological encoding and articulatory planning and execution We welcome any kind of contribution e g original research article review opinion that answers the above or other questions related to the Topic Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications United States.
