(Accepted 9 December 1999)

The acoustics of Italian historical theatres is to be regarded as a cultural heritage, which is to be preserved and studied. These actions are imperative for handing down the heritage to future generations and to avoid its loss. In this paper, the technical means for scientific quantification of the acoustical heritage are presented in the form of operative guidelines for acoustical measurements inside historical theatres. The document includes the advice of international experts and is being employed during an extended measurement campaign inside renaissance and baroque historical theatres. A relevant part of the paper deals with the experimental validation of the recommendations given in the guidelines, achieved by a dedicated test session inside the Municipal Theatre of Ferrara.

1. FOREWORD

The following guidelines are conceived with the intent of providing a technical and operative support to a systematic measurement campaign inside a wide ensemble of Italian historical theatres.

The measurement campaign aims at quantifying in a scientific way the acoustical heritage which is typical of historical theatres, with the aid of the resources of the more recent researches in the field of technologies for roomacoustical measurements.

The use of the collected acoustical data will have many spin-offs, which involve the life and the acoustical heritage of historical theatres.

Some of the more prominent ones are as follows: documentation: detailed description of the acoustical environment inside historical theatres; safeguard: systematic collection and cataloguing of the acoustical primary data in the deputed institutions (this material is to be considered in case of restorations) education: diffusion of the awareness of the acoustical heritage, especially among young people, by means of the latest multimedia technologies; research: development of the objective and subjective criteria for the evaluation of the acoustical environment in enclosures.
