Individual differences in associative learning Robin A. Murphy, Rachel M. Msetfi, 2014-09-24 Theories of associative learning have a long history in advancing the psychological account of behavior via cognitive representation There are many components and variations of associative theory but at the core is the idea that links or connections between stimuli or responses describe important aspects of our psychological experience This Frontiers Topic considers how variations in association formation can be used to account for differences between people elaborating the differences between males and females differences over the life span understanding of psychopathologies or even across cultural contexts A recent volume on the application of learning theory to clinical psychology is one example of this emerging application e.g. Hazelgrove Hogarth 2012 The task for students of learning has been the development often with mathematically defined explanations of the parameters and operators that determine the formation and strengths of associations The ultimate goal is to explain how the acquired representations influence future behavior This approach has recently been influential in the field of neuroscience where one such learning operator the error correction principle has unified the understanding of the conditions which facilitate neuron activation with the computational goals of the brain with properties of learning algorithms e.g. Rescorla Wagner 1972. In this Frontiers Research Topic we are interested in a similar but currently developing aspect to learning theory which is the application of the associative model to our understanding of individual differences including psychopathology. In general learning theories are monolithic the same theory applies to the rat and the human and within people the same algorithm is applied to all individuals. If so this might be thought to suggest that there is little that learning theory can tell us about the how males and females differ how we change over time or why someone develops schizophrenia for instance. However these theories have wide scope for developing our understanding of when learning occurs and when it is interfered with along with a variety of methods of predicting these differences. We received contributions from researchers studying individual differences including sex differences age related changes and those using analog or clinical samples of personality and psychopathological disorders where the outcomes of the research bear directly on theories of associative learning. This Research Topic brings together researchers studying basic learning and conditioning processes but in which the basic emotional attentional pathological or more general physiological differences between groups of people are modeled using associative theory. This work involves varying stimulus properties and temporal relations or modeling the differences between groups.

Mathematical and Statistics Anxiety: Educational, Social, Developmental and Cognitive Perspectives Kinga Morsanyi, Irene Cristina Mammarella, Denes Szűcs, Carlo

Tomasetto, Caterina Primi, Erin Anne Maloney, 2017-01-19. Mathematical anxiety is a feeling of tension apprehension or fear which arises when a person is faced with mathematical content. The negative consequences of mathematical anxiety are well documented. Students with high levels of mathematical anxiety might underperform in important test situations they tend to hold negative attitudes towards mathematics and they are likely to opt out of elective mathematics courses which also affects their career opportunities. Although at the university level many students do not continue to study mathematics social science students are confronted with the fact that their disciplines involve learning about statistics another potential source of anxiety for students who are uncomfortable with dealing with numerical content. Research on mathematical anxiety is a truly interdisciplinary field with contributions from educational developmental cognitive social and neuroscience researchers. The current collection of papers demonstrates the diversity of the field offering both new empirical contributions and reviews of existing studies. The contributors also outline future directions for this line of research.

Sociology David M. Newman, 2016-08-16. Adapted from David M Newman's best selling Sociology Exploring the Architecture of Everyday Life this briefer streamlined version continues to show students how to see the unfamiliar in the familiar inspiring them to think critically about their own lives and social contexts. As in the full text the author's approachable writing style and lively personal anecdotes make the Brief Edition a text that reads like a real book. It uses the metaphors of architecture and construction to help students understand that society is not something that exists out there independently of themselves it is a human creation that is planned formed maintained or altered by individuals. Rather than surveying every subfield in sociology the Brief Edition focuses on the individual and society the construction of self and society and social inequality in the context of social structures     The Commercial and Financial Chronicle ,1902     The Official Railway Guide ,1888     Global Update on Nutrition Labelling ,2015 This report has been compiled by the European Food Information Council based on input from the China Food Information Centre Cisan Consejo para la informacion sobre la seguridad de los alimentos y nutricion Food Industry Asia the International Food Information Council New Zealand Nutrition Foundation and South African association of Food Science and Technology and past input from the Asian Food Information Centre and Canadian Council on Food and Nutrition     Cue ,1966     Cass and Birnbaum's Guide to American Colleges Julia Cass-Liepmann,1996 The only college resource that combines the statistical data of a mega guide with the personal information of an evaluatuve guide Cass Birnbaum s Guide to American Colleges profiles more than 1 500 fully accredited American colleges providing complete coverage of admisssions requirements academic programs campus life faculty student activities and more     The Union Labor Directory ,1919     Comparative Guide to American Colleges ,1981     Snow's Pathfinder Railway Guide ,1924
