

Best Practices For Writing Effective Performance Reviews

1 Focus on facts, not opinions

Stick to what actually happened. Bring examples, results, and outcomes.

2 Write how you speak

Keep it simple and direct. If you wouldn't say it out loud in a conversation, don't write it down.

3 Start with what's going well

Open by recognizing wins or real progress. It sets a better tone for the entire conversation.

4 Talk about behavior, not personal traits

Focus on what they did, not who they are.

5 Tie it back to what matters

Connect your feedback to the role's expectations, team goals, and company values.

6 Stick to a simple structure

Use the same outline across your team to make things fair. A good format is: Achievements, Challenges, Development Areas, and Goals for Next Period.

7 Write to start a conversation, not to deliver a verdict

The review should set up a two-way discussion. End with questions like, "What are you most proud of from this year?" or "Where do you want to focus next?" Check out the questions list above for more great ideas of questions that can help with reflection and focus.

8 Have a plan for what's next

Every review should lead somewhere.
