WINTER WOODLAND

As the first snow begins to fall, children often look out at the trees and think they are just a mass of white. The trees are actually made of many different parts. The trunk is the main support. The branches are the arms of the tree. The leaves are the hands. The roots are the feet. The bark is the skin. The wood is the muscle. The sap is the blood. The tree is a living organism. It grows and changes. It is a miracle of nature.
