

The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes. Once the causes have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan of action. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem and determining the resources that will be needed to implement the plan. Finally, the last step in the process is to evaluate the results of the plan. This involves monitoring the progress of the plan and determining whether the problem has been solved.

Problem Statement

1. In the process of identifying a problem, what are the primary symptoms of the problem? Describe the problem in detail, including the scope of the problem and the impact of the problem.

2. What are the primary causes of the problem? Describe the factors that are contributing to the problem and determine the underlying causes.

3. Why is a solution needed? Describe the impact of the problem and determine the reasons why a solution is needed.

4. What are the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem? Describe the plan of action and determine the resources that will be needed to implement the plan.

5. How will the results of the plan be evaluated? Describe the monitoring process and determine whether the problem has been solved.
