Choose one of the following:

The Interpreter of Maladies* by Jhumpa Lahiri

The primary makeup of this collection of short-stories is taken from glimpses into the lives of first-generation Americans of Indian descent, expatriates, and Asian Indian immigrants. While each story deals with cultural differences faced by Lahiri's various characters, the conflicts and emotions they feel are entirely human and universal. Although the plot and the characters change in each section, the stories are connected as one flowing piece. The stories told in this book shed light onto the experience of being alienated in a new culture and finding a way through life as all humans must do. Parents are advised that this book contains mild sexual references, references to adultery, various cultural themes and ideologies, and references to religious themes.

The Joy Luck Club* by Amy Tan

This novel contains a series of sixteen short stories from three Chinese immigrant women and their American born daughters that fit together to create one cohesive piece. Each of the vignettes illustrates the various perspectives of the mothers and their daughters by each showing the struggles that each faces and the generational differences that they experience. Appearing on the New York Times Best Seller List, this novel is loved because of its straightforward manner and skill with which Tan speaks about Chinese culture and mother/daughter relationships in general. Mild profanity is used sparingly, and a number of sociological issues are addressed indirectly including death, marriage, adultery, divorce, childbirth, abortion and aging along with the consequences of each. In this novel, Tan balances Eastern and Western points of view in her portrayal of the significant events in life and with how people deal with them.

-- AND -- Choose one of the following:

Julius Caesar* by William Shakespeare (parallel text may be used)

This play is one of Shakespeare's most well-known tragedies based on the murder of the Roman Emperor, Julius Caesar, during 44 B.C. At the beginning of the play, Julius Caesar has come to power in Rome and has been offered the crown as dictator for life. Some of the citizens are concerned about his rise to power and what it may mean, and they must make a decision as to whether or not to allow him to gain this much power. This play discusses the themes of honor, ambition, and loyalty and contains violence.
