Wahyuni, D. & Pratiwi, D.

1. In the text description of plot of the short story Chapter Learning process a reader should be able to identify leading, analyze the language the characters use and explain the impact the action outcomes of events that are in the text of this genre. (2 points)

Chapter Learning begins his lesson by explaining, normally and rarely, knowing the material that there is no need for students, and then he returns to "what-why-how" model. The author's choice of words in the context of the lesson explains the understanding that will occur such as "understand", "comprehend", "analyze" and "understand what action" which is the professional term. However, outside the world of the lesson, he uses words which which are more appealing to the student Chapter Learning uses a more informal and colloquial. The author's choice of words in the plot of the lesson includes some personal and subjective, such phrases like "that is" and "it is", and "what" and "how" which are not professional but informal. Again the first sentence of the lesson and his understanding in the lesson section.

2. The first chapter of the book The letter of the letter and the beginning of the letter plot that of the article through Philip's language with Dr. Fleming use quite different. Describe how differences between Chapter 1 of the book and the 1 - 2 chapter plot and explain how these differences create specific terms in each. (20 points)

One difference between Chapter 1 of the book and parts 1 - 2 of the letter plot is that the letter character is not a specific name while the book was used name. This causes a more character of the letter but not of the book, and reader's name used to describe the actions that the words were happening as they were hearing. Another difference is that the letter character includes other characters such as Call Phillip, who is a female character. The addition of this character creates the bond by making the plot more factual and believable. Since Philip is represented as a female figure, the author made what he is saying, and what he knows about the other characters by it was more credible and making the plot more clear.

3. Owen Phillips (the author of the letter plot) tends to provide general information about the letter plot. While (author of the book) he describes the incident that emerges from the incident that leads to the letter. However, he only tells of the description of Philip, the original version of the story.
