Intellectual Teamwork Jolene Galegher, Robert E. Kraut, Carmen

Egido,2014-01-14 This book seeks to establish an interdisciplinary applied social scientific model for researchers and students that advocates a cooperative effort between machines and people After showing that basic research on social processes offers much needed guidance for those creating technology and designing tools for group work its papers demonstrate the mutual relevance of social science and information system design and encourage better integration of these disciplines This comprehensive collection closely examines the variety of electronic tools being deployed to solve traditional problems in communication and coordination Unfortunately research shows that these tools have not been as successful as their designers had envisioned partially because they were not always produced with the needs and goals of their human users in mind The editors goal is to entice more social scientists to orient their research around questions of practical interest to information system designers and to convince designers to search for the knowledge about social and organizational behavior that would make their tools more useful needs of individuals as their health worsens throughout their illness. Consequently, the reader will benefit from this book's focus on the science, methodology, application, and practicality of digital health developments in palliative care. This book explores the barriers that prevent the meaningful use of digital health in palliative care, including expenses, interoperability issues, data privacy and security concerns, lack of effectiveness and equity, and the concern that technology may reduce face-to-face consultations between patients and clinicians. There is an overall lack of consensus about digital health research priorities in palliative care and a lack of theories about how these technologies might improve care outcomes. Therefore, this book emphasizes the importance of identifying, discussing, and debating how technological innovations can be meaningfully used to ensure that frail people have appropriate access to palliative care services.
