

Anatomy of a hot flash

1

Fluctuating hormones drive the hypothalamus into over-activity. The vasomotor system (next door) reacts and indicates it's time to cool off

2

The vasomotor system sends messages to the heart, blood vessels and nervous system that the body needs to be cooled off

3

The heart pumps faster and blood vessels open up to circulate more blood and activate the sweat glands.

4

You're having a HOT FLASH!

It's getting hot in here!

reader provides both fascinating comparative ethnographic detail and a theoretical framework for organizing and interpreting information about health. While there are many health related fields represented in this book its core discipline is medical anthropology and its main focus is the comparative approach. Cross cultural comparison gives anthropological analysis breadth while the evolutionary time scale gives it depth. These two features have always been fundamental to anthropology and continue to distinguish it among the social sciences. A third feature is the in depth knowledge of culture produced by anthropological methods such as participant observation involving long term presence in and research among a study population. The first part of the book explores healing systems in different cultures the second and third provide a strong grounding in evolutionary and culture oriented analysis making clear the connections between biology and culture as they affect health the final part emphasizes case studies that apply the theoretical principles presented earlier to particular health topics. For medical anthropology medical sociology public health nursing and medical training professionals
