We have learned that the term evolution means to change over time. The Theory of Evolution says that living things on Earth have changed over time, many species that once existed are now extinct, and many species alive today were not here when life on Earth first formed. A scientific theory is an explanation to a scientific phenomenon that is supported by many scientists and is supported by a tremendous amount of data. One of the first attempts at a model to explain how organisms change over time was proposed by Jean Lamarck in 1802.

Model 1A

Jean-Baptiste
Lamarck

Nearly 2400 years after the Greeks first proposed a hierarchy of life...

Lamarck proposed a model that explained trait-change over time

1. More individuals are born than the environment can support - there is a struggle to survive.
2. All individuals in the species are alike initially, but some respond to the pressure by developing new traits that give them a better chance to survive.
3. When they reproduce, their offspring inherit the new traits they developed during their lifetimes.
4. Eventually all members of the species have the favorable trait.

mber

1. What was Lamarck's proposed model trying to explain?
2. In Lamarck's model do individuals or populations change? Explain.
3. In Lamarck's model are the offspring inheriting a trait that the parent had inherited or that the parent has developed in their life time?
