The Elements of Statistical Learning

Trevor Hastie
Robert Tibshirani
Jerome Friedman

During the past decade, there has been an explosion in computational and administrative tools, and this, along with the success of data as a source of information, such as medicine, finance, biology, and marketing. The challenge of understanding these data has led to the development of new tools in the field of statistics and applied data science such as linear learning, machine learning, and high-dimensional statistics. Many of these tools have common underlying principles in supervised and unsupervised learning. This book describes the important ideas in these areas of a common conceptual framework. While the approach is statistical, the emphasis is on concepts rather than mathematics. Many exercises are given, with a third part of each chapter, R devoted to a statistical analysis for practitioners and anyone interested in determining in context or behavior. The third learning is based, from supervised learning, on problems in unsupervised learning. The book is written in both an informal, "chatty" style that explains, "intuition" first and "learning" the first comprehensive treatment of the topic in one book.

The major new addition features three topics not covered in the original, including graphical models, random forests, ensemble methods, least angle regression,  $\ell_1$  and  $\ell_2$  regularization for the linear, non-negative matrix factorization, and sparse learning. There is also a chapter on methods for "web" data (e.g. PageRank) that is, including multiple testing and false discovery rates.

Trevor Hastie, Robert Tibshirani, and Jerome Friedman are professors of statistics at Stanford University. They are prominent contributors to the area. Hastie and Tibshirani developed graphical lasso and sparse matrix factorization, Tibshirani developed much of the theoretical, statistical, software, and computational in  $\ell_1$  and  $\ell_2$  regularization, and Friedman proposed the term and is co-author of the well-known 100 Algorithms in the R Programming Language. The co-authors of several data mining books including Applied Statistics, Applied Linear and Generalized Linear Models.
