Monarch Butterflies: Incredible Migration

Monarch butterflies are famous for their long-distance migration. Each year, billions of monarchs travel from the northeastern United States and southern Canada to the mountains of Mexico. This journey is one of the most remarkable in the animal kingdom.

The monarchs begin their migration in the fall. They fly south, following a path that is passed down from one generation to the next. They can fly for up to 100 miles a day and survive for several weeks on the wing.

During their migration, monarchs face many challenges. They must find food and shelter, and they are often hunted by predators. Despite these difficulties, they successfully reach their destination in Mexico, where they spend the winter in a state of dormancy.

In the spring, the monarchs return to their birthplace. They lay their eggs on milkweed plants, which are their only source of food. The eggs hatch into caterpillars, which grow and eventually pupate. The pupae then emerge as adult monarchs, ready to begin their journey again.

The monarch butterfly is a symbol of resilience and perseverance. Its incredible migration is a testament to the power of nature and the ability of these small creatures to overcome great challenges.
