

Euthanasia: Term Paper Outline

- I. Introduction
 - A. Define Euthanasia
 - B. Introduce the argument: Is active euthanasia morally permissible?
- II. Reasons For:
 - A. Active euthanasia relieves terrible suffering.
 1. For patient and for family
 2. Is it worth living if quality of life is bad?
 - B. All free choices should be respected if no harm is done.
 1. Is harm being done though?
- III. Reasons Against:
 - A. Killing innocents is always wrong
 - B. Killing innocents is worse than letting them die
 - C. Active Euthanasia will have bad consequences for doctors due to Hippocratic oath.
 - D. There is always a chance of recovery
 1. Prognosis is never 100% true.
 2. Any time a prognosis is given, it can change the next day.
 3. Nobody can predict a life.
 - E. Slippery Slope argument
 1. Once we allow active euthanasia for (for example) terminally ill patients, what will we allow next?
 2. Will it eventually be allowed for anyone at any time?
 3. It will become out of control.
- IV. Conclusion
 - A. Recap what was previously stated in the intro and the main argument.
 1. Is active euthanasia morally permissible?
 - B. State final argument that active euthanasia is not morally permissible.

In this paper I will be evaluating both sides of the moral question: Is active euthanasia morally permissible? To start I will defend the argument with some reasons supporting active euthanasia. These supporting arguments include taking away the suffering for both the patient and the family. If quality of life is down, is it worth living? Another supporting argument is that if no harm is being done then all free choices should be respected. But is harm being done? This makes a perfect transition to the other side of the argument. I will then provide some reasons that active euthanasia is not morally permissible. This includes stating that killing innocents (which in this case would be patients) is always wrong and is worse than letting them die. This also includes the effect it would have on doctors due to the Hippocratic oath, the fact that there is always a chance for recovery and that it can lead to a slippery slope argument. Due to the fact that there is more support for euthanasia being morally wrong, I will summarize why in the end, active euthanasia is not morally permissible.
