

Surgical Package Coding Guidelines

Most medical and surgical procedures include pre-procedure, intra-procedure, and post-procedure work. When multiple procedures are performed at the same patient encounter, there is often an overlap of the pre-procedure and post-procedure work. Payment methodologies for surgical procedures account for the overlap of the pre-procedure and post-procedure work. The component elements of the pre-procedure and post-procedure work for each procedure are included as component services of that procedure as a standard of medical/surgical practice. General surgical package coding guidelines are as follows:

Surgical Package Coding Guidelines

- Many invasive procedures require vascular and/or airway access. The work associated with obtaining the required access is included in the pre-procedure or intra-procedure work. The work associated with returning a patient to the appropriate post-procedure state is included in the post-procedure work. Airway access is necessary for general anesthesia and is not separately reportable.
- Anesthesia coding guideline prevents separate payment for anesthesia services by the same physician performing a surgical or medical procedure. The physician performing a
