implementing performance based practices in its service contracts to improve quality and reduce costs Earlier Project AIR FORCE research examined implementation in installation support services The project has now examined purchased services that support weapon system development and sustainment systems services Under performance based services acquisition PBSA buyers should 1 describe what service is desired not how to do it 2 use measurable performance standards and quality assurance plans 3 specify procedures for reductions in fee or price when services do not meet contract requirements and 4 include performance incentives where appropriate The authors conducted interviews at an Air Logistics Center and a Product Center to learn whether and how service contracts included these performance based practices Many at the two Centers felt that it is difficult for systems service contracts to satisfy all four of the PBSA criteria To satisfy the requirement to use measurable performance standards for example some personnel believe that the desired result of a service must be known in advance and objective data must be collected frequently to measure performance against that result This cannot be easily done for many systems services such as engineering support and advisory and assistance services Despite this difficulty however both Centers use a performance based approach applying the other three criteria to purchase many services and many personnel felt that they can determine and convey whether the contractor met their needs The authors conclude that many of the approaches used by the Centers satisfy the intent of the criteria

A Guide to Best Practices for Performance-Based Service Contracting ,1998 Performance based service contracting PBSC emphasizes that all aspects of an acquisition be structured around the purpose of the work to be performed as opposed to the manner in which the work is to be performed or broad imprecise statements of work which preclude an objective assessment of contractor performance It is designed to ensure that contractors are given freedom to determine how to meet the Government s performance objectives that appropriate performance quality levels are achieved and that payment is made only for services that meet these levels This document contains best practices that have proven useful for drafting statements of work solicitations and quality assurance plans and in awarding and administering performance based service contracts Many of these practices were identified through the government wide Office of Federal Procurement Policy PBSC Pledge Program This document is neither mandatory regulatory guidance nor is it intended to serve as a detailed how to manual Such manuals exist already and citations to them are included AIAA Aerospace Sciences Meeting and Exhibit, 42nd ,2004
