Racial Disparity and the Crack Cocaine Federal Sentencing Guidelines Sandy L. Binnicker,2012 Racial disparities throughout the Federal Prison System are perhaps more apparent today than ever largely due to the fact that people are becoming increasingly cognizant of disproportionate sentencing for various types of crimes most notably for crack cocaine versus powder cocaine offenses established under the Federal Sentencing Guidelines Regardless of their legal origins or who or what is most responsible for their continued utilization the uses of disproportionate sentences for similar offenses are part of an alarming trend occurring in our criminal justice system It is crucial therefore to have a better understanding of the magnitude of this problem both academically and statistically so that further efforts can be made to reduce and or prevent this trend from continuing and causing additional devastation The purpose of this research was to determine if retroactive crack cocaine federal sentencing reforms have been effective in reducing racial disparity rates in the Federal Prison System A collection of literature combined with comparison T tests of federal sentencing data was analyzed to compare disparity rates before and after the sentencing reform Cocaine & Federal Sentencing Policy Richard P. United States of America V. Westbrook ,1996 Responding to the Culpable State Leo Zaibert,Julian V Roberts,Jesper Ryberg,2025-02-06 This volume explores ethical aspects relating to claims for mitigation arising from culpable state action or inaction It answers the important and controversial question to what extent should the state mitigate sentencing for defendants who have been victims of state misconduct The volume explores the normative justifications for mitigation and answers many intriguing questions For example in terms of the procedural challenges should the offender have to prove a causal link between state wrongdoing or neglect and the offending Can a court take judicial notice of state induced social adversity and apply this consideration to all affected offenders Other questions relate to the implications for courts and sentencing commissions which issue guidance to courts regarding mitigation at sentencing To what extent is the offender less culpable as a result of state misconduct and what are the limits of any resulting sentence reductions Do sentence reductions for state misconduct undermine proportionality or deprecate the seriousness of the impact on the victim of crime Should this factor be included in any sentencing guidelines or possibly even as a statutory mitigating factor Each contribution explores a distinct cross jurisdictional claim for mitigation on the basis of State negligence or misconduct towards the offender The chapters all address the appropriate response of courts at sentencing United States of America V.
