

Introductory Questions - Ethan:

Hello World! I have returned.

I find it quite interesting that not a single study guide service (at least, one I know of) has publicly summarized these introductory questions. I find it a shame that many are disregarding this section, considering it has plenty (far more than I'd expect from an "Introductory Question" section) of challenge-worthy content topics and questions.

For as belated as Pocketpwaa is, we're somehow at the top of the game for summarizing this very first portion of the curriculum!

Rip Van Winkle slept for twenty years, Steve Rogers for seventy, Aang for a hundred—in each case, with remarkably little impact on their health. (Rip Van Winke did grow some facial hair.) Imagine that you went through something similar and woke up in the year 2120 (albeit with neither superpowers nor supercharged follicles.) How quickly do you think you'd notice you were in the future? Would beds feel different? Would chairs be strange shapes? Would there be funky new food in the fridge? Would there still be a Global Round in Bangkok? Outside your home, would you encounter a strange new society or one roughly like our own? Or would you encounter no society at all, just a picturesque (and probably terrifying) post-apocalyptic landscape? [LIT, SPC]

The first portion of this year's curriculum is already an intriguing one. There's a lot to unpack with time-travel shenanigans, especially if they're not "true time-travel". Without further ado, let's get started!

Note all characters here are fictional.

Rip Van Winkle is the main character of a Danish-American short story of the same name. Written by Washington Irving, also Danish-American, the story follows Rip as he falls asleep in the Catskill Mountains (New York), only to wake up 20 years later.

Introduction to Research Methods in Education Keith F Punch, Alis Oancea, 2014-11-10 Based on Keith Punch's bestselling Introduction to Social Research Methods this book introduces the research process in a range of educational contexts. In this updated second edition you will find guidance on every stage of research with chapters on developing research questions, doing a literature review, collecting data, analysing your findings and writing it all up. With a new chapter on ethics and additional coverage of Internet research and mixing methods, the second edition contains everything you will need if you are studying on a research methods course or doing a research project for yourself. Introduction to Research Methods in Education provides you with balanced coverage of the range of methods employed by educational researchers. Practical advice on collecting and analysing qualitative, quantitative and mixed methods data. A range of examples from student projects to show how research is done in real life educational settings. A companion website with additional resources for lecturers and students. Keith F Punch is Emeritus Professor in the Graduate School of Education at The University of Western Australia. Alis Oancea is Professor of Philosophy of Education and Research Policy as well as Director of Research at the University of Oxford, Department of Education.

Managing Child Nutrition Programs Josephine Martin, Charlotte Oakley, 2008 Managing Child Nutrition Programs: Leadership for Excellence, Second Edition gives readers the skills and knowledge they need to develop and lead today's child nutrition programs. Each chapter and accompanying case study are prepared by recognized child nutrition professionals and academic leaders with proven applications in the development, implementation, management and evaluation of child nutrition programs. The Second Edition takes a systems approach to program management by focusing on four program areas: administration, nutrition operations and communications, and marketing. This approach prepares readers to achieve innovation and excellence in their child nutrition programs through effective leadership in each of the program areas with the desired outcome of helping children develop healthy food habits and giving children access to healthful food when under the care of the school or institutional setting. Managing Child Nutrition Programs has been fully updated to reflect recent changes in legislation and school nutrition programs to give readers the most authoritative information. The Second Edition focuses on the latest issues in the school nutrition environment such as a school's responsibility to curb student obesity, school board policy and the sale of non-nutritious foods and the need for collaboration to balance healthy eating and physical activity. This valuable resource for dietetic educators and community health and public health professionals is also an essential tool for school districts and state departments of education. With chapters prepared by recognized child nutrition practitioners and academic leaders, this publication addresses the strategic needs of child nutrition programs today.
