Audio Console
control preamplifier-equalizer

The Audio Console is a fine electronic instrument, specifically designed to be the central control for music reproducing systems of the highest calibre. Components are of a quality rarely used in commercial equipment. For example, eighteen of the resistors used are of the low-noise carbon-deposit type; Allen-Bradley potentiometers are used throughout. A high-Q toroid is the basic component of the Sharp Cutoff Filter. Terminal board construction is used in the main assembly which, with its associated tubes, is floated on soft rubber shock mounts. The Audio Console is constructed on two chassis, the power pack being remote to keep the transformer, etc., away from the main unit.
